Memes: New Mental Software to Operate Remote Viewing Programmes

Ideas have the power to spread through a population, rather like a virus. It was Dr Richard Dawkins, the eminent biologist, who first called these contagious ideas memes. They have also been called mental viruses. In remote viewing training we call positive memes used to inculcate the remote viewing state, new mental software or Software of Success. These memes switch off the negative states that keep individuals in the state of anxiety that inhibits remote viewing. If you imagine a world full of infectious mental viruses that use humans as their carriers and in which they breed, mutate and are then passed on to other humans by word of mouth, culture, the media, or by biophysical means, you can see how our world is shaped by memes. It is accurate to say that the whole of our society is run by the memes it carries.

Memes

Memes are ideas. Table manners, throwing Frisbees, wearing platform shoes, these are all memes. Our culture is built up from a complex composite of memes that define who we are, what we think and what we do. They are pre-eminent in defining society. It might be thought that we all have free will and can do whatever we want. Unfortunately the situation is not so simple. People can only think and do what they know. If they have no knowledge of an alternative reality available to them, then they will never think
